Insights

Complaint volume generally increased throughout the reporting period, rising from approximately 5,400 complaints in 2017 to a peak of roughly 13,000 complaints in 2022. However, complaint volume declined to 9,131 in 2023. This decline should be interpreted cautiously, as the 2023 reporting period only covers data until August.

- The CFPB received a total of 62,516 complaints relating to Bank of America over the six-year reporting period. The average complaint-forwarding interval was 1.2 days, indicating that the CFPB forwarded the complaints to the Bank of America within a short period after receipt.
- The Bank of America recorded a timely response rate of 96.06%, indicating a strong and prompt response to consumer complaints. However, 1,494 complaints remained in progress at the end of the reporting period, suggesting that a portion of complaints had not yet received an outcome or the outcome had not yet been recorded.
- The total number of complaints the CFPB received for Bank of America decreased between 2022 and 2023. However, a 9.35% increase in complaint volume was recorded in 2023. Further investigation is required to determine the reason for this increase despite the overall decrease in volume.
- In terms of products, the checking or savings account product generated the highest number of complaints during the reporting period, accounting for approximately 24.8K complaints. In contrast, the student loan complaints represented the smallest proportion of complaints. This indicates that checking and savings account services were the primary source of consumer complaints.
- Year-over-year complaint volume increased steadily between 2020 and 2022, reaching a peak of 12,953 complaints in 2022. While the total number of complaints recorded in 2023 (9,131) was lower than the full-year total for 2022, complaint volume increased by 9.35% relative to the same period in the previous year (period ending in August, 2022; not the full year).
